I am somehow blessed all through my life even in worst of scenarios. We jealously guard our right to choose.

At the same time, a position became available that was a lateral move and more interesting.

We love getting to be your pastors. For example, a job change affects not only your work responsibilities but also your commute, your salary, your coworkers, and so on. And then I determined that I wanted to go to school for health coaching and start my own business, which lit me up like crazy.

Awesome picture! Yet most people instinctively go for A in the first scenario, the worst case scenario.
