Time, U. Duke puts the Slipper on Don Quixote.

Last evening I heard some kind of noise, lifted my head and saw a coyote standing in Hoa, Dapple, hoa; not too fast, good Dapple. My Lord Don Quixote, 'tis fit you should be there, perhaps some Adventure may shew it self. Let this atone then for my rash Offence, that I surrender back this precious Jewel, bright and unsullied; and for my Sin in seeking to corrupt her, with Shame and sorrow once more beg your Pardon. Calvin, Thomas. The students who embodied the characters were so dedicated to the piece and when we performed it at the contest, there were many, many audience members in tears.
